Inspiration

As a former member of Coast Capital's Youth Intern Program, I have benefited from Coast Capital's belief that youth empowerment is central to their future. Now, I feel it's my turn to give back to other young people. I want to use what I learned in the program to encourage and support youth in our community.

Fun Fact

Mondays are the best day of the week for me (really) because that's when my favorite podcast Crime Junkies gets streamed!

What do you hope to achieve on the Council?

I hope to contribute to Coast Capital's support for youth-focused community organizations while developing a deeper understanding of how the organization is involved in the community. The opportunity to bring my perspectives to the Council will also help me gain greater knowledge of the non-profit sector.

What accomplishment are you most proud of to date?

I received a Presidential Scholarship to attend the University of British Columbia. I believe strongly in the value of education and the important role it plays in empowering youth so I am really proud of this recognition.

Bio

Jaclyn is currently a student at UBC's Sauder School of Business (Go Thunderbirds!). She plans to specialize in finance, but her long-term goals are to enter law school after her undergraduate degree and pursue a career in the legal profession.

In addition to her undergraduate studies, Jaclyn works part-time as a member service representative at the West Broadway branch of Coast Capital Savings. This hands-on experience has given her a practical understanding of the world of banking and how financial literacy can help young people achieve what's important in their lives.

For leisure, Jaclyn loves to travel and spent a month and a half in Europe last summer exploring different countries and going on a sailing trip!
